powerfully communicating the maker's ideas. Peggy especially likes to emphasize humor, wit and irony—allowing the masks to speak for themselves.

This year we have returning exhibitors with new work for the community to enjoy and collect. Glenn Carter will again join the show with his sculptures, both large and small. Ginger Steele of Insomnia Pottery will favor us with her latest functional salt-fired wares. Zweifel Art Glass, just returning from the American Craft Baltimore Winter Market, will show their striking blown glass. Their "Landfill" series, made from the "last of the batch" are perfect for that "small glass of wine." Hound's Reach Studio, Craig Rasmussen and Cristina Strelova, will be showing their spring collection of animal inspired jewelry. Carol Taylor will be sharing her latest pastels inspired by the Applegate Valley as well as images from her travels around the county, the country and the world. Nancy Adams will have her newest work at the show and Jane Hagen of Shady Cove Candies will be there to sweeten your day with her gourmet chocolates.

Valley View Winery is, as last year, donating $3 of every tasting fee; artists also donate pieces for raffle, which again benefits the Applegater. What could be better than a glass of fine Applegate Valley wine, fine chocolates and local art? Beat the winter blues and come join us in our benefit to support our own version of freedom of the press, the Applegater. For more information: www.valleyviewwinery.com or www.nancyadams.net.
